Honor Code

The primary function of an Honor Code is to instill a common sense of honor and morality in each student. This system revolves around the concept of respect, responsibility, accountability, and academic performance; the self-respect one has for one's work, and the respect one has for the words, the work, and the possession of others. "Violation of the Honor Code" includes, but is not limited to, cheating on an examination or other academic work, plagiarism, and the abuse of resource materials. It is equally important that no student tolerates such behavior by others. Each student is responsible for abiding by and upholding the code of honor.

Violations:

1. At Patrick County High School, violation of the Honor Code is defined as any form of dishonesty regarding academic work. Conduct that may constitute violation of the Honor Code will include, but not be limited to, any of the following:
 - a. Copying another student's academic work that has been completed for credit, including class work, homework, workbook assignments, etc.
 - b. Allowing another student to have access to, or copy, from academic work that has been completed for credit.
2. Giving or receiving any form of assistance to or from other students during quizzes, tests, exams, or other types of evaluative activities.
3. Using unauthorized materials to complete any form of academic work including, but not limited to, open notebooks, cheat sheets, open texts, notes written on desks, hands, etc.
4. Submitting as an original work any form of assignment that has been created by another person.
5. Plagiarizing: Plagiarism is presenting work for credit that is not the original work of the student, except where research papers and related writing projects are properly footnoted.
